The Stars Say—

For Thursday, Oct. 17

An interesting and possibly eventful day is presaged from the astral potencies for intervention. This may be felt mainly in the realm of the personal life, home, feelings, sentiments, in social plans and prestige as well as in all pertaining to these in a cultural and psychological phase. There should be a definite sense of security in the home and in domestic and social stability and soundness, with much felicity and worth manifesting. However, in public or group activities there is need for caution.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year in which the affairs of heart and home may be placed on foundations of safety, security and soundness. Cultural and artistic advancement, all stable and enduring growth may contribute much to happiness and satisfaction. But group or public operations centering in similar objectives call for precaution, as altruistic or utopian purpose may run into intrigue or pitfalls. A child born on this day should be artistic, refined, gracious and cultured, with high altruistic ideals and ends. These may beget complications or make for its being "too" and "sentimental." Generally it will have a useful and happy life.

THE ROAD TO SHANI LUN

by Rita Mober Hanson

YESTERDAY: Beautiful Lynn Britton is being taken by force to marry the Prince of Shani Lun. She views the prospect with horror, but strangely enough she cannot down her interest in her two captors—Shan-Lun, the good and friendly Buddhist priest, and Tenu Fario, the handsome representative of the Prince. Now Lynn has run away from the caravan, and is escaping through the Mongolian desert with an American plant collector in a rattling motor car.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

Safety—For A While
"My name is Lynn Britton," she explained. "I disappeared from civilization in a border down north of Peiping. Have you heard, this far west, of any inquiries about me?"

Wallace shook his head. "No, I haven't though we're usually quick to get the news of a foreigner being taken by bandits in any part of China."

She smiled ruefully. "I rather fancied my friends in America might make inquiry about me when I dropped out so abruptly. I was traveling with my brother and we became separated. His name is Dick Britton."

"That name has not been in the dispatches either, I'm sure. Why should the bandits bring you across the desert instead of applying for the ransom money at once?"

may affect the heart.
Gas trapped in the stomach or intestines may act like a heart-stopper on the heart. At the first sign of distress, heart men and other specialists advise that you get rid of the gas. The heart is the pump of the body and if it is not working properly, the body will not function. Indigestion is a common cause of heart trouble. It is caused by the food not being properly digested. It is a warning sign that you should pay attention to. If you have indigestion, you should see a doctor. He will give you the proper treatment. It may be as simple as a change of diet or as complicated as a surgical operation. But it is better to get it right now than to wait until it is too late.

Opposite the Court House

"I don't know," she confessed. "We had been invited to visit the Prince of Shani Lun and were on our way. Surely, the story she was telling could hurt no one. She was free; that was all she cared about."

"Ah," cried Mr. Wallace. "I begin to see the Prince; he is an extremely wealthy man."

"Do you know him?" asked Lynn eagerly.
"No, but I hope to meet him some day. Shani Lun has great attractions for a plant specialist. It is a country where deserts merge into rolling grasslands, and these merge into mountains clad in evergreens."

He settled down to driving as the trail improved. "We'll not waste any more time in getting to Lanfou. I left yesterday and planned to be gone a month. Will my wife be surprised?"

"You're very kind to me," murmured Lynn. She was glad that the questions had ceased. She began to feel the excitement of the journey. The road was winding and the scenery was beautiful. She felt as if she were in a dream. The road led her to a small town where she was to spend the night. She was tired and hungry. She went to a small restaurant and ate a meal. She felt better. She was ready to go on.

Occasionally the girl looked back as if she half expected to see Tenu coming after her on a winged camel. Just what he was doing, she wondered. In vain, she tried to visualize his activity. One thing she was already beginning to suspect. She would miss his old twinkling eyes; his good sense; Little Bamboo and her giggles. Tenu—Lynn did not want to analyze her feeling about Tenu.

From the divide they coasted down to a vast, sandy plain and stopped for water and a late lunch at the abandoned ruins of a large, walled town. Here, all trails met and vast herds of sheep and donkeys and camels watered at crude troughs made from popular logs.

A few hours later they came to an endless mound of earth, perhaps ten feet high and equally wide, broken occasionally by trails for entrance to the sacred soil of the Celestial Empire. "You are seeing the Great Wall," remarked Mr. Wallace. "Here, it is merely a ridge of dirt though it started out so grandly where you first viewed it."

Taking one of the cuts through the ridge they entered a vast graveyard. Grave cones, as far as the eye could see, reached across the plain. The last resting place of those Chinese, who pioneered in Mongolia or Turkestan or Tibet, but came home eventually alive or dead, to rest inside the Great Wall. It was a desolate place.

Refuge At Last

Mr. Wallace smiled at Lynn.

"Don't look so downhearted." "It makes me wonder," she said dismally. "If all the fuss and stir we make in life in order to have our own way is worth the while."

"You're tired, Miss Britton. Wait until you meet my wife and have a chance to rest. Then you will feel better."

"You are very kind to me," she said again.
"Did those brigands treat you decently?"
Lynn smiled. "I can't complain."

"The government will want a description of the men so that they can try to round them up."

"All Chinese look alike to me," she said evasively.
"You'll learn differently when you've been in the country longer," he prophesied. "When Chinese first see Americans, they all look alike."

The trail had now become a road lined with carts and caravans and steady traffic. They had reached the suburbs of the town. Passing a yamen with posted sentries, they crossed a bridge over the Yellow River and entered the town of Lanfou on the only street that was wide enough to accommodate an automobile.

They drove beyond the wall to the inner town to enter an extensive compound on the further side.
A tiny, grey-eyed woman came forth to greet them from one of the rooms that flanked the court. Mr. Wallace jumped from the car and took her in his arms.

"Has the month passed slowly?" he asked.
"Silly," she rebuked him, "you left only yesterday."

He turned and introduced Lynn and repeated her story as they walked into the house. His new friends marveled, but they did not doubt the tale. Was she not the tall, dashing type of handsome American girl capable of coming through any outlandish adventure intact?

They let her go to bed early and laughed the next morning when she was compelled to appear at breakfast in Mr. Wallace's dressing-gown and a pair of his pajamas because she did not wish to wear her heavy Mongol outfit. Little merchants and a tailor already waited in another room.

"You were headed for an interesting place," said Mr. Wallace. "Shani Lun is in a peculiar position, holding the balance of power, as it were among Russian and British and Chinese and even Japanese interests at the point where they meet in central Asia. The little country seems to have been born to fit the job. He knows how to get an invitation against the other to keep himself from being gobbled up."

"Do you know what sort of a person he is?" Lynn asked.
"No one that I have ever talked to knows the sort of person he is. He seems to be almost as exclusive as the ruler of Tibet. Through his representatives he has a certain amount of commercial dealings with the American and European firms here in Lanfou. Any of their members would give a leg as would I to get an invitation such as you received to visit the court at Delun. Europeans are seldom welcomed there."

"Will you be resuming your journey?" asked Mrs. Wallace politely.
Lynn shook her head. "Not just now."

"This misadventure has been too much for you," she said sympathetically. "I suppose you're wild to hurry home."

Where To Go?
Lynn hesitated. "It's strange but I'm not homesick in the least. I may be a little mad, I feel like a crusader or a migrating locust. I don't know where I'm going but it's not back to America. I hear there's a lilac tree in Amido."

Little Mrs. Wallace looked bewildered but her husband could understand a person's traveling half way round the world to visit a certain tree.

"It's the famous tree at Kum Bum," he said. "For those who have the eyes to see, I am told, its leaves bear a magical character of the sacred mantra."

"I'd love to see that tree," Lynn cried.
Mrs. Wallace was bored by such talk. "I've some news," she interrupted. "A specially conducted party of American tourists from San Francisco came in by airplane a few days ago. They chartered a river steamer for a boat trip through the upper gorges and are returning today. Tonight we're invited to dance on board their boat. Miss Britton, that naturally includes you, and you must have a dress made."

They rose from the table.
Lynn was excited. "People from San Francisco? Have you met them yet? Do you know any of their names?" she asked as they walked across the court to interview the tailor and silk merchants.

"I don't," Mrs. Wallace answered. "I understand the party includes a shipping heiress and her husband who wishes to honeymoon in Central Asia. I believe they were headed for Shani Lun but could not get permission to enter the country."

"It might be Peggy Armiter," Lynn exclaimed. "It sounds like her. Could it be Peggy Armiter?"
"I'm sure I don't know. All Americans and Europeans in Lanfou, not over a dozen at present outside the missionaries, are invited to the dance. There will also be present a couple of Chinese aviators who married American college girls and a Turkish political agent and his Belgian wife. I hope you will find friends among the tourist party."

George Vase, 29, of Kalamazoo, Mich., above, one of the national speakers for the Townsend Club movement, will speak at a public meeting Friday night at 8 in Druids hall. The meeting will be sponsored by Marion Townsend Club No. 2. No admission will be charged. Mr. Vase, a former chemist, will discuss current political and economic questions.

Lynn had lifted Sam Telford out of Peggy's retinue.
That night Lynn discovered it had also, apparently, interested Peggy in Sam. She had married him.

The three met on the steamer deck that had been prepared for the dance and decorated with the inevitable flags and Chinese lanterns. The girls fell into each other's arms and little cries of surprise while Sam Telford stood by looking slightly fatuous. Lynn turned with laughing eyes and gave him her hands.

"Dear Sam, I thought of you many times when I needed help," she told him. "I could imagine you coming to my rescue."

Peggy interrupted a bit disconsolately. "You seem to have all the luck. From our experience nothing ever happens in China except rumors."

ZONING PLAN PROPOSED FOR OHIO HIGHWAY

By The Associated Press
COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 15.—Zoning of Ohio's highways to prevent motorists from traveling through unincorporated villages at 45 miles an hour was suggested today by Harry E. Neal, chief engineer of the state division of traffic safety.

Present law makes no greater restriction on speed through unincorporated villages than on open rural highways, Neal said. Under the zoning system, limits lower than 45 miles an hour could be imposed.

Neal's proposal will be submitted to the Ohio safety council's traffic committee Wednesday.

Coat, vest and trousers are held separately on a new garment hanger.

Mrs. Ross, Head of U. S. Mint, Is Speaker at Luncheon Here

Predicts Party Victory in Talk to Democratic Women.

By EDNA S. DUTTON

Predicting a victory for the Democratic party at the polls in November, but charging her audience to keep working until the last vote is cast, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, director of the U. S. mint, addressed approximately 150 Democratic women at a luncheon meeting yesterday at Hotel Marion. The meeting was arranged by members of the Women's Division of the Marion County Democratic club and guests included Mrs. Mildred Jaster, national committeewoman, Mrs. Mildred Minck from state headquarters, Mrs. Gail D. Jordan of Findlay, Eighth district committeewoman, and Democratic women from Lima, Findlay, Kenton and other nearby towns.

Mrs. Ross' visit to Marion was her first stop in Ohio on a brief trip through this section of the country in the interest of the Democratic campaign. She came to Marion from Detroit Monday night, and following the meeting yesterday went to Lima where she spoke at 6 o'clock. Today she was scheduled for a talk at Fremont. Mrs. Jaster accompanied her to Lima.

Costumed in a navy blue dress to which was pinned a smart blue hat, Mrs. Ross captivated her audience with her sincere and frank personality and her earnestness in her cause. In addition to being the first woman director of the mint she also has the distinction of being America's first woman governor, succeeding her husband as governor of Wyoming in January, 1925.

Defends Party Record

In reviewing the achievements of the Democratic party during the last seven and one-half years, Mrs. Ross emphasized that the record is clear and that the business of the organization is not defending its record but in bringing before the people what has been accomplished. She cited President Roosevelt as a "great leader, a man with a message of confidence" on his mind and in his hand, "when he took office at a time when economic gloom was the thickest." The people of the country are not forgetting those things, she stated, referring to bank failures, soup lines, riots and industrial depression. "They recognize the leadership they have had." It is up to the opposition to prove they have something better than has been offered the voters of the country up to this time, Mrs. Ross said in discussing the present presidential campaign, and declared that even Wendell Willkie's most ardent supporters are disappointed in him. "As his stock falls, that of President Roosevelt rises," she said.

Lists Achievements

In pointing out some of the achievements of President Roosevelt's administration she cited the increased value of farm products, the CCC camps and their character building and educational programs, social and economic security and the advancement of women to positions of importance in national and political life. "The principle of collective bargaining is established in laws of our country for all time," she declared and cited as a guarantee of security by the government the homes saved to the owners through the Home Owners Loan.

In discussing the national campaign Mrs. Ross stated that the Republicans are finding very little fault with the policies of the administration and quoted the approving farm policy of the Democratic administration, assuring the wage earners they will not lose their benefits and endorsing the whole social policy. "If candidates are so satisfied with the program it is not surprising that the rest of the country is pretty well satisfied," she said.

She urged the women to emphasize that the Democratic party is no foe to business, only a foe to some of the cut-throat methods used by some business concerns.

methods used by some business concerns. Because of some of the cut-throat methods, regulations, no doubt irksome to business, particularly those employing those methods, had to be made," she declared. Many great business enterprises, assisted through loans, are now thriving even better than before, she said.

Mint Is Busy

In discussing business she stated that the mint is a business enterprise, explaining that when business recedes orders for coin recede. At present, she said, the mint is operating 24 hours a day for the first time in 100 years or more to keep up with orders.

The growth of the public debt and bureaucracy Mrs. Ross described as necessary to the progress we have made towards normal living, peace of mind, courage and comfort. If critics are intellectually honest, she maintained, they will not think of expenditures but look at the other side of the ledger and see the tangible results.

The matter of public defense was cited as the most engrossing domestic program at this time. "Democracies have fallen and should England be unable to stand up against those hungry wolves we are going to be at the mercy of those aggressive forces," she predicted.

The building up of our national defense is going to cost us sacrifice, and this, she declared, will strengthen our character, teach us that there are other values more precious than material comforts, chief of which is the liberty of spirit that we love. "We are going to be nerved by the thought that this shall be one place on the globe where light of liberty will ever gleam, where men and women can work out their destiny according to their own plans, where the golden rule shall be recognized as a principle in government."

With the complex problems confronting the nation in the coming years, problems which call for statesmanship, the people are not going to trust the highest executive position of the nation

Davey Gives Marion County Talks

agent of the present governor of Ohio ordered the American flag taken down merely because I was in town, that this incident is one of the most unfortunate things that ever happened in Ohio," Mr. Davey asserted. "No political party has any proprietorship of the American flag. We all have reverence for it and respect everything that is precarious and priceless to all who live under its protection, irrespective of party affiliation, religious faith or racial extraction."

Sharing the speaking platform with Gov. Davey both here and at Prospect were John McSweeney of Wooster, Democratic candidate for U. S. senator, and Kenneth Petri of Gallon, the party's candidate for congressman from the Eighth district. Ivan Gongwer of Upper Sandusky, candidate for state senator from the 13th-31st district also spoke at Prospect.

In his talk here Mr. McSweeney praised the New Deal program, emphasizing particularly the speed with which the national defense program is being launched. He referred to a letter in which he said George Washington wrote to La Fayette that "there probably will be times in American history when emergencies will make it necessary to elect a president for a third term."

"America is now in one of the most, if not the most, trying period in its glorious history," Mr. McSweeney declared.

Goes Into Geography

In his talk at Prospect, Mr. McSweeney pointed out that Senator Taft is from Cincinnati and that Harold Burton, the Republican candidate opposing Mr. McSweeney, is from Cleveland.

"If Mr. Burton is elected," he said, "rural Ohio will have absolutely no representation in the United States senate. Both of our senators will be from our largest cities."

Mr. Petri attacked the record of Congressman Frederick C. Smith of Marion, who is seeking reelection, and declared that Dr. Smith "was against everything."

Referring to newspaper accounts that Dr. Smith would accompany Wendell Wilkie from Mansfield to Marion today, Mr. Petri said, "Inasmuch as Mr. Wilkie has pledged his support to the national defense program I hope that Dr. Smith will call Mr. Wilkie's attention to the fact that he (Dr. Smith) was as much responsible in delaying the defense program as anyone on Capitol Hill and that he voted against all major defense measures until a few weeks ago when that body passed them unanimously."

Dr. C. J. Altmaier, eighth district Democratic committeeman, presided at the meeting here and Samuel Almendinger, candidate for state representative, was in charge of the meeting at Prospect.

On both programs trumpet solos were played by James West of Columbus, national trumpet champion of the American Legion, and the Harding High school band played at the meeting here.

Balance of Power in Europe Likely To Fall to Stalin

By DEWITT MCKENZIE

This is one of the big moments of the European war—world history, for that matter—since Soviet Leader Stalin may hold in his hands the balance of power between the Berlin-Rome axis and Britain as he debates Russia's attitude towards the conflict at this critical juncture.

It is a moment of tense drama, too, for they say that Fuehrer Hitler is trying to jockey the Red chief into another horse-deal, that Germany's Japanese ally is seeking a non-aggression pact with the Muscovites to stabilize the position, and that England is trying to crash the party within the foreboding walls of the Kremlin.

The Balkans are seething with a report that Russia and Turkey are about to conclude a military alliance to block any axis drive down the peninsula, and into the near east. The Turco-Russian pact, again, have declared their determination to resist. Greece appears to be with them, and Bulgaria is insisting on neutrality.

It is difficult to see how Stalin can afford not to challenge Hitler now if the latter tries to smash his way across the Dardanelles. No territorial bribe which Hitler could offer would reimburse Russia if this strategic strait should fall under German domination.

This great waterway is at once the gateway between the Black sea and the Mediterranean, and together with the little sea of Marmora and the Bosphorus forms a vast water-barrier between Europe and the Near East.

Russia either must control the Dardanelles or have it under guardianship of friendly hands—like Turkey's. Were the Dardanelles to fall to Hitler it would

Rolling Along

THREE MORE weeks will tell the story. The 1940 presidential campaign is coming into the home stretch.

Officially, New Dealers are asking what keeps Wendell L. Willkie and his friends from throwing in the sponge. Unofficially, they're in a cold sweat. They know what keeps the Republican candidate from giving up.

The Willkie campaign just keeps rolling along. It doesn't roll much faster or much slower—a little faster right after the Republican convention in June, a little slower after President Roosevelt began to run sitting down in August.

A little burst of speed at the last minute would put Mr. Willkie out ahead. A switch of a few hundred thousand votes in certain pivotal states would unseat Mr. Roosevelt. It is worrying his friends and dependents more than they will admit. Mr. Willkie is coming into the home stretch in a good tactical position; he will make a strong finish.

The opposition knows it. It has tried two ways of stopping the Willkie campaign. Ignoring it didn't work. Scoffing at it didn't work either. The idea was to convince undecided voters that they would be throwing away their vote on Willkie, the same strategy was used by Germans when their agents advised Frenchmen to swing over to the Nazis because France was going to be conquered anyway.

Some voters were affected according to plan. There was a letup among Willkie workers. But realization that New Dealers, themselves, are taking no stock in their own propaganda of futility is energizing the Willkie campaign just at the time when third term strategy called for it to lose momentum. Wendell L. Willkie can be the next president of the United States if his sympathizers think he can, a thought which makes promoters of the Roosevelt-Forer movement squirm with apprehension.

It's the Real Thing

THEY'RE IN the army now, Marion's national guardsmen took up army life yesterday.

This is not windy talk about national defense, or something "on order." It's the real thing. In the final analysis, defense is manpower, trained and equipped to withstand any enemy. The national guard is furnishing the first compact wave of manpower. Compulsory service will furnish the second. By the time the conscripts are in shape to pick up their first lessons in defense, the guardsmen, who already know the first lessons, will be equipped to show them the ropes. In a real sense, they are destined to stand with the regular army in this respect.

Marion salutes its new soldiers and wishes them luck. Under the circumstances, the best luck they can have is to become part of a national defense system so strong that no nation anywhere on earth will tackle the United States in the current era of international prowling. That is the best luck any American can have—the best any American can expect to have.

Man of the Golden West

WHEN ALL of us were younger, Tom Mix was a good influence on our lives. It was lucky for everybody concerned that he was photogenic—the movies, Tom and his fans. He made the simple virtues attractive and mutually profitable. Like the late Will Rogers, he found something better to do with cowboy talents than cowboy.

When news of Tom Mix's death in an auto accident reached the country last Sunday, a few careless persons may have thought it was just the passing of another cowboy in show business. Tom was lots more than that. He was the man of the golden west, the symbol of the pure, outdoors life, the nemesis of villains, the triumphant torch bearer of cinematic justice for a nation.

Things are more complex than they were when Tom Mix was a Grade A hero. These days the heroes are hard pressed to keep abreast of the scoundrels, and the west is nothing but a place with electoral votes. It must have been too thick for Hero Mix to understand in these later days too, this new complexity which has obscured the simple virtues.

Wanted—Men with Ideas

THE AMATEUR inventor is likely to be regarded by his neighbors and sometimes by his relatives as something of a crackpot but U. S. defense chiefs take him seriously.

The world has had comparatively few professional inventors like Edison and many of the things so important to life today were born in the brain of amateurs who dabbled with an idea.

Washington is the gathering place for men with schemes. Most of them are fantastic and impracticable but there is still the chance that one of them may have a valuable secret and for that reason nearly everybody gets a chance to show what he can produce.

Right now the government is interested especially in a light weight machine gun but it is willing to talk business with anybody who has anything to offer for the national defense. The army big shots believe that a workbench in the basement or the garage may produce something that the country needs and the latestrings is out to the men with ideas.

News Behind the News

Dies Committee Agents Discover Master Key to Hitler Propaganda in U. S.

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16—The master key to Hitler's scheme of propaganda in the United States was discovered by Dies committee agents when they seized the Zapp correspondence. It is:

"Keep Japanese-American relations ruffled to prevent U. S. involvement in Europe."

Manfred Zapp, the Nazi agent masquerading as a German newspaperman, set it forth in his report to his home news office in Berlin. Jan. 15, 1940—a report which appears to have been adopted by der fuhrer himself in view of recent developments in the far east.

"Summing up all the facts," Zapp wrote, "it can be said that the masses in the United States are still against active participation in the war, but the tremendous artillery barrage of officially stated anti-German propaganda is becoming increasingly effective."

"The only and at the same time the strongest guarantee for American neutrality appears to be a ruffled United States-Japanese relationship, which for the present and for an indefinite period to come will not permit a European involvement of the U. S. A."

"However, there exists a visible endeavor in the state department to clear up the far eastern question in order thereby to use a free hand in Europe."

This particular report has created a sensation in the state department where it is regarded as a confirming revelation of Hitler's now unfolding plan of employing the Japanese as dupes to serve his purposes against the United States.

Zapp could qualify as adviser in this respect if any advice was needed in Berlin. He operated in Manchukuo a few years ago in the same capacity of news-fifth columnist as his correspondence published yesterday—discloses him to have been engaged in here. He also served Hitler in Ethiopia, London, Scandinavia and South Africa. The department of justice is now investigating a report that he was requested by the British to leave his South African post before coming to the United States in 1938 to set up his trans-ocean news service.

A possibility that Zapp was even more than an official propagandist has been opened to government eyes by one particular letter in which he summoned "confidential agents" to attend a dinner in his New York apartment. At least state department linguists have translated the German terms used in the letter as meaning "confidential agents," although they are susceptible to a secondary ambiguous interpretation which might enable Zapp to plead that his guests were only to be confidential "correspondents."

Proof.

The actual existence of the real working fifth column in this country is completely proved by this Hitler newspaperman who wrote too much and failed to destroy enough. The fifth column, his records reveal, is not that of the hound, its vicious nature and scope is disclosed by its name "foreign division of the National Socialist party." The initials standing for the German equivalent of this title were found on numerous letters in his files.

When Zapp was notified of meetings of this organization in form letters, he was advised to "show his party card" at the door, a fact which legally proves their secret nature. The organization addressed him June 29, 1939:

Dear Party Member Zapp: For accounting reasons you are requested to pay this year's special assessment for the Nazi party convention in Nuremberg amounting to one full month's dues no later than June 1939."

On April 22, 1939, he was required to pay $10 as "part of the cost of the Hitler birthday celebration."

Dozens of names on these and other letters are in the hands of government authorities who have guarded against the possibility that their birds may fly, by putting them either under subpoena or surveillance.

Connection

The government now has proof of an interwoven connection between German diplomats, Zapp's trans-ocean news service, the NSDAP, the German Library of Information, the Fellowship forum—a skein of propaganda and information wider than that which caused President Wilson to ask the withdrawal of German diplomats in this country before the last world war. In addition to the $140,000 which Zapp spent in 18 months, the books of the German Library of Information show an outlay of about $100,000 in the few months between April 1 and Aug. 20 of this year.

Steps by this government are imminent.

U. S. Air Raid Shelters

Plenty of Tested Models in Official Hands.

(From a bulletin of the National Geographic Society.)

U. S. officials charged now with blueprinting air-raid protection for American factory workers and other civilians in time of war have as models a world of bomb shelters already tested in the crucible of fire.

From Chungking to Berlin, London to Turin, air-raid refugees burrow under city traffic and deep into rural hillsides. As pill-box structures, they rise in citizens' backyards and public parks. Ancient stone castles, subways, railway stations, churches, museums, office buildings and apartment-house cellars have been remodeled into civilian fortresses against the death and destruction that falls from the skies. Near one camp of exiled Londoners steps have been taken to make use of a former quarry, whose eight miles of subterranean passages offer sturdy cover for thousands of people.

Architectural "design for safety" ranges from family-sized concrete "bunkers" to vast and intricate underground cities, from garden houses of reinforced steel and double-concrete, cheerfully disguised by climbing roses and ivy vines, to tubes that pierce mountains like so many Swiss-cheese holes. A striking example of the latter type of shelter, which, incidentally illustrates the advantages of living on a cliff, is found at Ramsgate, on the fighting southeast corner of England. Tunnels some 23 entrances lead to a safe refuge as can be found in miles of tunnels excavated from the towering chalk cliff on which the city stands.

ALTHOUGH German censorship has passed little on the subject in recent months, news dispatches from Berlin in the spring of 1940 gave details of an entire city built below the surface of the German capital. Capable of sheltering two and a half million people at one time, it is linked at various points with the subway system, in order to facilitate mass evacuation to the country when considered necessary.

Along its many miles of passageways rooms are set aside for radio stations, food supplies, gas mask storage and police stations. The city beneath the city is even reported to have a completely equipped operating room in its hospital; and its own electric power plant and water works, in case of communications break with the outside world.

British factory shelters are of special interest to Americans, in connection with certain air-raid precautions recently suggested by the U. S. War Department to firms handling defense orders.

Various factors are considered in building effective refuges for industrial use, including careful planning of details of construction and easy access to working quarters. In order that the plant "can carry on" after bombings, even though some workers are injured, the grouping of important machinery is suggested. Authorities suggest that factory workers be so handled in raids that skilled workers in the same type of operations, supervisors, and experts shall not be lodged in the same structure.

ONE model system of shelters appears on factory lawns as gently sloping mounds, only a few feet above the ground. Made of reinforced concrete, they are covered over and camouflaged with sod, doorways with steps leading down to the refuge itself are set upright slabs of concrete, additional protection for the all-important entrance.

Such group shelters, generally equipped with gasproof doors and first-aid facilities, take different forms of construction, both inside and out. When corridors are long, they may have cross-walls to help localize any damage. Many are arched and steel lined; others are built with zigzag angles to minimize a possible hit. Some are relatively luxurious, with benches, tables and floor boarding; still others are starkly bare.

For absolute safety, however, even against direct hits, the deep subterranean tunnel system is hard to improve on. Such a refuge, for instance, has been provided for one big company in Birmingham, England, through excavations of conveniently located masses of sandstone rock. More than 50 feet below the surface, it is designed to give complete immunity from attack to 10,000 workers.

THE advantages of deeply buried public shelters as opposed to surface and shallow construction are now reported under study in London, following complaints of the discomfort and insecurity of various family and public shelters. London officials, preparing for the expected long-term winter bombings, are planning deep refuges to be provided with sleeping quarters, proper ventilation, heat and sanitation. Particularly welcome to Londoners, almost continually exposed to the noise and rocking blasts of high explosives, is the promise of a comparatively quiet haven of rest.

Shallow or deep, safe or inadequate, the worldwide question of bombproof architecture is fundamentally based not only on economic and social factors, or even on human ingenuity. Above all are the definite limitations and advantages of geography and geology.

London experts, studying the example of deep shelters evolved by Spanish Barcelona (once holder of the title of the world's most bombed city) have the natural

65 Hours of Yesterday

THOUSANDS of times the remark has been made, referring to electricity, "I don't know what we'd do without it." Recently in Tucson, Ariz., residents found out. The city was without electric power for 65 hours.

P. H. Erbes Jr., member of the staff of Printer's Ink, was in Tucson at the time. He describes the experience in the September issue of the magazine as follows:

"The lights went out Tuesday evening. And that was that until Friday afternoon, it starts out mildly enough. You have to give up reading. But you go to sleep serene of mind. You begin to get inklings early in the new day.

"The porch is innocent of the morning paper. Say, how bad was that storm? And what's the war news? You snap on the radio. Silence. You decide to shave. Then you realize that your resources total two razors, both electric. Gruesome news issues from the kitchen. No orange juice—the only juicer is electric. No coffee—percolator dilly. Well, why not make some toast and coffee on the stove? The stove, you are reminded, is also electric. You drink a glass of milk, which is warm because the refrigerator has been off all night.

"DOWNTOWN, you climb; no elevators. Factory machinery stands idle. Adding and dictating machines are useless. Except for a run on flashlights, there are no customers. At home, the wash day schedule has collapsed. Nothing to iron with anyway. Vacuum sweeper is impotent. The Mrs. couldn't even soothe her nerves by keeping her appointment for a new hair-do—no wave machines, no driers. You eat mainly canned meats and cold vegetables. Even the staff of life becomes a problem. Bakers can no longer operate their slicers.

"When the blessed whirr of the refrigerator comes on and the fans begin to sing you swear you have never heard a sweeter symphony. Suddenly you begin to wonder what's wrong with this picture. Here is an industry which supports almost all the conveniences of civilized living. Chance interruption of its service literally paralyzes the vital functions of a modern community. Yet a cheap thorn politician, who has never created a dime's worth of human comfort in his indolent life, can gain public favor by bawling abuse of 'the utilities.'

Always Right

By The Associated Press
PLEASANTVILLE, Ky.—Every person attending the Baptist church in this town of 300 sits on the right-hand side.

The custom has been observed so long that even the oldest members are unable to remember exactly how it started. However, the most plausible reason is that the church was constructed to seat almost twice as many persons as there are in the congregation, and the members began sitting together on one side to avoid being scattered over the large room.

Fews on the left-hand side are practically new.

Manse Built in Day

FRANCISCO, N. C.—Four rural Presbyterian churches in Stokes and Surry counties, served by the Rev. L. F. Cowan, had just enough funds to buy materials for a manse. So the members of the congregation got together and erected the building in one day.

Profit from Herbs

By The Associated Press
CRYSTAL, Me.—Here in potato-famed Aroostook county, 73-year-old Pearl E. Young has a farm devoted to culture of ginseng and golden seal, forest-grown herbs with real or fancied medicinal virtues. In China, his best market for ginseng, Young has sold the herb for as much as $24 a pound and his acreage yield has been as high as $3,000.

Men, women and children worked day and night on the new life-saving structures, reported early in 1939 to be accommodating some 600,000 people, are provided with hospital, sanitation and other facilities lighted with electricity and ventilated in many cases by electrically-driven fans. Some were built in super-imposed circular galleries, separated into fortification-like chambers; others were long tunnels, protected by deep layers of earth and concrete, with a surface "head" of sand, like some of the people, are provided for the bomb impact itself. Although Barcelona had no private shelters for individual families, groups of hotels, apartments, and office buildings combined to supply themselves with community refuges. In addition, in the near-by-hills, were built a number of tunnels, many brick-lined and equipped with ventilator shafts so designed as to deflect the shock from any direct hit of a stray bomb.

Daily Bible Thought

THE EASIEST TASK IS NOT ALWAYS BEST: Now therefore give me this mountain, whereof the Lord spake in that day; for thou heardest in that day how the Anakim were there, and that the cities were great and fenced; if so be the Lord will be with me, then I shall be able to drive them out as the Lord said.—Josh. 14:12.

Ethel Goes to a Cowboy Pic!
But It's a Waste of Good Paper for They Don't Hit Anybody

By DAMON RUNYON

Mr. Joe Turp Writes From Brooklyn:

DEAR SIR: Last night I took my wife and me to the movies to see a western and we started out I see now look here, you see you know I like westerns and just once you do not care for them I don't want to keep making remarks while the picture is on because that spoils it for me.

I see I sit through many a picture and don't like just because you are enjoying it. I never open my mouth and if you are going to make any cracks about this one I will rather not go at all. She sees all right I promise you I will not say a word. May I will like it myself though I do not think I should allow westerns unless Gary Cooper is in them.

So she sat very quiet through the picture and when we were going home I see I thought that was a pretty good western Ethel, how did you like it? She sees well I did mind it Joe but it was not really a good one it was not really a regular western. They out something very important.

I see what was that Ethel? She sees why villain never once sees to the hero mighty country you've got around here. Joe you know very well the villain in a regular western always supposed to say that to the hero so hero can say yes and we aim to keep it that way. They left all that out Joe.

I see well Ethel I don't think 'hat is so important and she sees yes it is Joe. We people go to see westerns they expect to see certain things. They expect to hear the villain say mighty good country you've got around here and they expect to hear the hero say yes, we aim to keep it that way. Joe you see cannot have a regular western unless it things are in it. Another thing the shooting is worse than usual.

I see why Ethel what are you talking about I see I never saw any more shooting in a western than this one. I see that is why I enjoyed it much. I see you know I love plenty of shooting in my westerns. She sees yes Joe but I see they hardly ever hit anybody with their shoot. They shot off their pistols and rifles hundred times and seldom hit what they were shooting at. Joe I have been disgusted with western ever since I watched Sammy Topolitz in shooting gallery at Coney Island last summer.

I see what has Sammy got to do with it? Ethel? She sees well nothing Joe but you remember the day at Coney that he picked up a rifle in the shooting gallery and broke many targets the fellow who was running the place asked him to please go away? I see I member all right Ethel and she sees well know Sammy was raised right in this neighborhood and he was a rifle and pistol outside the shooting gallery and it disgusted me to think that those fellows in the westerns who are supposed to know all about shooting can not shoot as good as Sammy.

I see Ethel that is foolish talk. I see you know very well all that shooting in the westerns was out hitting anybody is to keep the excitement going. I see if somebody got hit every time I fired a shot in a western pretty soon there would be no one left to keep the picture going to finish and Ethel sees well my uncle Ben sees a disgraceful thing.

I see what is disgraceful about it and who does your uncle Ben come into it? Ethel sees goes to see the westerns and he sees it is disgraceful to them to be doing all that shooting in this country needs every smidge of gunpowder it can get to use when we have a war. Joe uncle Ben sees he saw a western the other morning where they used up enough gunpowder to fend the Brooklyn navy yard for three weeks.

I see Ethel your uncle Ben is daffy and I see no I don't think so Joe. I think he is especially if they had Sammy Topolitz using gunpowder. I don't think I will go to see more westerns Joe. I kept thinking tonight of that day that shooting without hitting anybody about what my uncle Ben sees, he sees it is a terrible waste.

I see you bet you will not go to see any more at least with me Ethel. I see nobody is entitled to see a western if they can not understand it and enjoy them and she sees well of course I not me. I will not go to see one that Gary Cooper is in Joe. He is like Sammy Topolitz does not waste gunpowder.

Yours truly,
JOE TURP

Ignoring Father Time

CHARLOTTE, N. C.—Life sometimes began at 70 down south.

Thomas Holmes, Mt. Olive, is 80 years old but says he feels—well, not a day over 40. And when Holmes began picking between 1 and 170 pounds of cotton a day, his friends had to admit he didn't act like an octogenarian.

Edward P. Brandt, 85, a blacksmith of 70 years' experience and still one of the best in his line, says he doesn't trust doctors.

"When I'm sick, I just work it off," he says. "A doctor says, 'I don't know what's the matter with you,' and then I sit down and write me a prescription."

John J. Fenton, Mebane, 70, received a tick nine feet long when he left for a 9,000-mile jaunt which was to include both the San Francisco and New York fairs.

Arthur Brooks, 85, learned to drive his automobile at 76 and has driven from Bryson City to his Spring Creek, Pa., farm and back, a distance of 1,800 miles, more than 20 times.

Mrs. G. P. Hamrick, 76, began her 60th year as a school teacher at Shelby.

George Green, who became deputy clerk of federal court at New Bern in 1888, celebrated his 81st birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Brockman, playmates in childhood, and now married for 59 years, celebrated their 77th birthdays.

Anecdotes of Ohio

By GILBERT F. DODDS

The village of Groveport, southeast of Columbus, takes its name from twin settlements begun in 1843.

Pioneer settlers in Franklin county, William H. Rarer and Jacob E. Wert, were actively interested in developing the country around the present site of Groveport. In September, 1844, the western section of Groveport was laid out by Wert, who named it Wert's Grove.

In February, 1844, Rarer laid out the eastern part, naming it Rarer's Port.

Growth of the twin hamlets was given impetus by their location on a main highway and the old canal. Confusion resulted from the two names for what amounted to one settlement.

Finally, in 1846, the residents, treating both the original residents, Wert and Rarer, deleted their names, combining the remainder to make "Groveport."

"I'll have to get up. That was Larry. He proposed and I accepted."

EVANGELIST SPEAKS ON NEED FOR CLEAN HEARTS

"Spiritual Wells" Is Theme at Epworth Church.
The spiritual wells in a person's soul must be cleansed from time to time, Rev. John R. Church of Winston-Salem, S. C., said in an evangelistic sermon delivered last night at Epworth Methodist church. "Many church people have polluted wells or hearts because they have let sin creep in,"
he said.

Jesus taught that if a person was saved he had something like a spiritual well in his soul, Rev.
Church pointed out. His text was from Genesis 28:18.

E. Clay Milby, song evangelist from Bentleyville, Ark., led the congregational singing. Rev.
Church will preach again tonight at 7:30.

YOUR HEALTH

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
Born to Fatigue
The war will certainly create a great many cases of nerve shock, but perhaps, curiously enough, it will probably cure a good many chronic nervous invalids.

The layman can scarcely realize how much of the doctor's time is taken up with patients who are really, in the sense of organic disease, not sick at all. They consist of two classes, described by the late great physician Richard C.
Cabot as:

(1) The mass of women who
by the inertia of rest are thoughtlessly drifting anywhere.

(2) The mass of men who by the inertia of motion are recklessly rushing nowhere.

Typical of many such human derelects are those who suppose themselves to be suffering from "nerve fatigue." They must continually rest on account of that fatigue. They were born tired in nine cases out of ten, and the more they rest the more tired they get. Nothing but work will rest them. They are not fatigued; how could they be? They do not do anything. It is really internal friction that is wearing them out.

It is here in this class that the war may come as a savior. War and war work and preparations for war—these may be the focusing points that will give many "neurasthenics" a new interest in life, and in the work they do and in the determination to accomplish a definite objective they will find a way of life that entirely eliminates the friction that has been grinding them into nothingness.

Do not misunderstand me. I am certainly far from advocating war. I certainly do not think a war is worth the saving of our neurasthenics. But isn't it tragic that they cannot find something as completely absorbing as war, something in ordinary life that fills their mental and spiritual horizons sufficiently so that they could shake off their lethargy and go to work for it and become whole, complete and useful human beings?

Isn't it too bad that the medical profession cannot find that kind of an objective for them in ordinary life. Doctors are accustomed to say to these people
"Don't worry—just stop thinking."
But that would be just like sitting on the safety valve and inviting an explosion. Nothing checks thought except the substitution of another thought.

Imaginary Ills
It can sometimes be laid at the door of medical advisers that they surround these people with the idea of disease—a pernicious idea.
Who has not heard of the type of patient who, because he or she has a pain in the side and a little palpitation, lies awake, loses appetite, worries himself or herself sick, and drags around possessed by friends and relatives and medical attendants with the thought of "heart disease?" Such a person should not be smoothed down but speeded up and taught to live harder, faster, more intensely.

Clots in Legs Claimed Cause of Sudden Deaths

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Writer
PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 16—Real danger to persons sick in bed, is the likelihood that blood clots will form in the veins of their calf muscles, was reported today at the University of Oregon medical school.

These clots give absolutely no sign of their presence. But fairly often, after the patient gets up, he dies suddenly of pulmonary embolism.

That means blood clots in the lungs, a condition which causes 3 to 4 per cent of all deaths. The Oregon discovery is some startling proof that the unsuspected clots in the calves are the main source of these clot deaths.

Henceforth, it has been thought that most of the clots in the lungs came from the thighs and pelvis.
Many lives can be saved as a result of the calf clot discovery, since they largely can be avoided simply by taking leg exercises
while in bed.

Many hospitals, both in Portland and in other parts of the country now require that all who are able to do so exercise regularly while in bed.

This source of sudden death in the calves, although first pointed out years ago by Erdheim in Vienna, went generally unrecognized for three reasons. Erdheim failed to put his observations in writing.
The calf clots gave no sign of their presence. At autopsy physicians did not study the calves closely.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Has Difficulty Restraining an Impulse to Hit Back as Vertizen Tells of His Plotting Against Mary.

THE SYMPATHY for Philip Vertizen which I had felt during the first part of his story, vanished inconspicuously at his smug revelation that he had tested Mary's qualifications as a wife for Noel as well as a Vertizen star, in the ordeals through which he had put her since her marriage to Noel.

I believed his statement "upon all that I hold holy," that he had not planned to ruin Mary's marriage or to take her cherished leading role in his play away from her. But this arrogance of attitude toward her, though unconscious, and the result of his heritage and training, was something that I found it hard to forgive.

But he was in the full tide of revelation, and I knew there was no stopping him. Indeed I had no wish to dam the flow of reminiscence. He was revealing things which I long had suspected, and the confirmation of my conjectures was welcome.

"Purposely," Philip Vertizen went on, "I did not tell either Noel or Mary of the reason I wished to separate them within six months of their marriage, to send Mary to the farm, and to make Noel the lonely guardian of a furnished house in the city which I had destined as the sanctuary of my little lady and her daughter."

A Refuge for the Queen
"Incidentally," he digressed with a slight smile, "that house is still waiting. My plans were changed by the activities of the revolutionists, and Olga had to be taken to a hospital. Then your father decided that she must come here, — oh! — very correctly, of course, and so she had not yet seen the refuge I prepared for her."

It was again Lillian who answered him. I could not have done so, for I fancied I detected a slight resentment against my father in his voice, and was correspondingly furious at what I termed his lack of appreciation of the manner in which my father had turned into victory his egregiously futile and mistaken efforts to rescue the royal prisoners on the pirate ship, errors of judgment and action which almost resulted in the loss of the enormous fortune Vertizen had provided as ransom, and in the worst of all possible tragedies, Noel's death as well.

"She'll like it all the better for the delay, Phil," Lillian said comfortingly, and he threw her a grateful smile before going on.

"Mary came through that ordeal beautifully," Noel's father went on, and with amazed gratification I noted a distinct note of pride in his voice. Was it possible that the affection for his daughter-in-law which he had simulated since her marriage for the sake of appearances was beginning to have reality in it?

"Then, having satisfied myself on that point," he went on, "I turned my attention to the vitally important question—to me—was she a real trouper?"

"As you know, Lillian," he turned his eyes on his old friend—"I have an unalterable belief that no actress can effectively simulate the great fundamental emotions unless she has experienced them. Mary had known love and marriage, but I did not think she had known jealousy and potential heartbreak. I deliberately engineered her absence from Noel, and the throwing of Noel and

Alaska Is Topic of Address Here by Kenton Author

ALASKA, its people, customs and beauty was described by Frederick Machetanz, young author and artist of Kenton, at a meeting of the Marion Association of University Women last evening at Hotel Harding. In addition to his talk the author had with him some of his paintings and also his books about Alaska. Contrary to general belief the country abounds in vivid colorings including yellows and golds, and vegetation, he said, is most extensive. He described the vegetables raised there as being larger than those in this country and said fruits and vegetables were plentiful. The average temperature is around zero.

He pictured Alaska as a great country in the near future because of its beauty and the progress made in modernization. He is particularly suited to airplane travel.

Mr. Machetanz brought an Eskimo costume which was modeled by one of the club members.

Miss Marian Conley was in charge of a short business session and Mrs. Fred P. Strother, program chairman, presided for the program hour. The members met for dinner and later were joined by a number of non-club members interested in the talk.

JUST AN IDEA

Neat, but expensive. Winged diamond clips, valued at $3,300, lift these black suede pumps to winged Mercury levels. A nice idea, but maybe you'd content yourself with imitation sparklers for your shoes.

CRESTLINE MEMBER ONE OF HOSTESSES TO CLUB

Miss Dorothy Horning of Crestline and Miss Donna Ruth Oberlin of Mansfield were hostesses for a meeting of the "Three Star" club Tuesday evening at the club Tuesday evening at the Green Lawn club east of Bucyrus. Fall flowers and leaves, and lighted tapers provided a colorful decorative note for the long table arranged for dinner.

Bridge was played, awards going to Miss Elizabeth Snyder of Mansfield and Miss Opal Crone of Ashland. Attending from Marion were Misses Esther Reisinger, Mildred Baughn and Leola Chick, Mrs. Evelyn Peardon and Mrs. Annetta Thomas.

The club is composed of women employees of the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. in this district.

The Press presents a series of three articles on the liberal education of the State university. The first article in this series is "The Liberal Education of the State University," by J. H. R. A "narrow gauge" camp insisted the university should confine itself to the teaching of agriculture and the mechanical arts. The "broad gauge" group wanted a broader program of higher education, offering educational opportunities not adequately provided in the traditional colleges of the nineteenth century.

The controversy raged for several years in the legislature, in newspaper editorials and in "letters to the editor." The faculty won, and here was the faculty building when 17 students began their studies Sept. 17, 1873 in one building on the Neil farm north of the city.

Edward S. Orton Sr., president of the university and professor of geology; Norton S. Townsend, agriculture; Thomas C. Mendenhall, physics; Sidney A. Norton, chemistry; Robert W. McFarland, mathematics; Joseph Millikin, modern languages, and John H. Wright, ancient languages.

The president and professor of agriculture occupied houses which are still in use on the campus; Professor Millikin lived in a hotel, and the other faculty members had quarters in the $112,484 college building. Out-of-town students lived in basement rooms, partitioned by curtains, and ate a campus dining room.

It was not until five years later that the land grant college received the name of Ohio State university.

Now its seven original courses have been expanded into 70 departments of instruction, divided among 10 colleges, a graduate school and five special schools. The colleges are: agriculture, arts and sciences, commerce and administration, dentistry, education, engineering, law, medicine, pharmacy and veterinary medicine. The special schools are home economics, journalism, nursing, optometry and social administration.

The college of medicine is a direct descendant of the Willoughby medical college, founded on Lake Erie in 1834. The law school opened Oct. 1, 1891, and was operated for three years in the county courthouse until facilities were provided on the campus.

Dr. Howard Bevis will be inaugurated Oct. 25 as the university's seventh president. The others besides Orton, in the order of their tenure, were: Walter Q. Scott, William H. Scott, James H. Canfield, William C. Thompson and George Rightmire.

MAJOR GENERAL NOW

Commanding General Edmund L. Daley, commanding officer at Puerto Rico, is shown after taking oath on his promotion from a brigadier general. Ceremony was at San Juan, where he has his headquarters.

WALL COLOR
Dark walls soak up light just as a sponge soaks up water. A dark-walled room which is not exceptionally well illuminated by daylight is bound to require more electric light in the evening. With dull dark walls light is dim and struggling. With clean light walls both electric bulbs and daylight spread their radiance in full strength.

Rainfall Sets Low Mark Here in September

September was one of the driest months in recent years, the total rainfall measuring only .98 of an inch. The normal rainfall for a September in Marion, according to statistics of Observer E. H. Raffenberger, is 3.66.

The extremely dry month followed one of the wettest. August of late years, probably accounting for the fairly luxuriant second growth among many plants and flowers.

Temperatures were off, too, although not as sharply as precipitation. The average last month was 53.66 degrees, 1.84 degrees under the general average of 55.50. There were only two days in September when the thermometer registered in the 90's, and then it was only one degree higher. The night of the twenty-sixth the drop was to 33, lowest so far this fall. One hundred degrees in 1889 and 39 degrees in 1913 are the record maximum and minimums for the month. Generally, September was disappointing to those who looked forward to it as a "last month of summer."

Thirteen days were clear from sunrise to sunset, 10 were partly cloudy and eight were definitely cloudy.

The OUTSTANDING BARGAIN EVENT OF 1940!

HUSKING CONTEST LEADERS TO MEET

300 Expected at Final Session Before State Event.

A meeting of approximately 300 persons who are working on plans for the state corn husking contest will be held next Tuesday night at the new Ohio sales rooms of the Huber Manufacturing Co. on North Main street, it was announced last night at a meeting of committeemen at the Chamber of Commerce.

All committeemen are invited to the meeting at the Huber offices as guests of the Ohio Farmer magazine, sponsor of the husking contest. Entertainment and refreshments are on the program. The meeting will start at 8 o'clock. Various committee reports were made last night. One of the announcements made was that the state highway department will cooperate in guiding strangers to the scene of the contests by erecting directional signs on all main highways nearby.

The contests will be held Oct. 22-24 on the Alexander farm nine miles northwest of Marion near Morral on the Irvin-Shoots road. Among safety features at the contests will be maintenance of watchman service at the Chesapeake & Ohio crossing on the Irvin-Shoots road during the contest days.

Among appointments made recently was that of Arden J. Millison of Marion as announcer over the public address system at the contests. Attending last night were Paul W. Augenstein, H. H. Beringer, Sheriff Fred E. Miller, Arden J. Millison, Ralph E. Epley, Harry W. Hoch, County Agent Homer Porter, Prof. Earl Jones of Ohio State university extension service, Luther J. Mitchell, C. B. Caslo, Foster A. Davidson, general chairman, Louis E. Michel of the C. of C. John W. Ruth, E. B. Willey, R. E. White, Ransom Buck, operator of the contest farm, and Corp. W. D. Mariner of the state highway patrol.

THIEF GETS NEARLY $500 AT HOME HERE

Money Taken While Garden Street Resident Sleeps.

N. E. Dickson of 151 Garden street reported to police last night that while he was sleeping a sneak-thief entered his house, rifled his drawers and took between $470 and $480 in cash.

Mr. Dickson, and Erie railroad engineer, told officers he retired about 8 p. m., leaving his trousers on the foot of the bed. When he got up to go to work about 11 p. m., his trousers were still in the room but the money was gone, he reported.

Police said that apparently the sneak-thief entered through the front door which had been left unlocked.

crossing, at which point the platform was made. The system worked perfectly—almost.

Officers kept the crowd behind the restraining ropes until Willie's train halted. Then with one grand rush, youngsters and oldsters alike, crowded up to the rear platform. Apparently no one was injured in the split second melee.

Here, There, Everywhere

School children and in some cases adults, many armed with cameras, perched on roof tops of nearby buildings, climbed trees and vied for choice angles from windows at the Central school building. A loudspeaker system carried the candidate's words to the crowd. Several men, sitting on a railroad box car a block and one-half away, reported later they had no difficulty hearing the talk.

Mrs. Wilkie, who appeared on the platform with her husband, received an ovation when she was introduced. Smiling almost constantly and waving to the crowd, both she and her husband exchanged hand shakes with well-wishers before their special departure. Mrs. Wilkie held a spray of beautiful red roses during her appearance.

The train on which the party arrived was pulled by a double-header, or two engines. It came in on the north tracks, in full view of the waiting crowd, and drew a long round of applause on its first trip past the scene. It halted at Union station and backed out on the south track to the spot for the platform talk.

Saluted By Cannon

Heralding its arrival was the blasting of some sort of a toy cannon fired by a visiting veterans organization. It was heard at least eight times before the din of the crowd roaring its welcome drowned the cannon-fire. Political placards, flags and bunting decorated the immediate scene and the uptown section.

PRESIDENT ASSUMES CONTROL OF EXPORTS

Invokes Power To Requisition Essential Materials.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—President Roosevelt today assumed full control over the sale or export of raw and manufactured products vital to the national defense program, after invoking the government's power to requisition any equipment, munitions, machinery, tools, materials or supplies needed to prepare the nation for any emergency.

In an executive order the President ordered the army and navy munitions board yesterday to make an immediate survey to determine the necessity for requisitioning any large domestic supply for national defense purposes.

The board was authorized at the same time to determine whether it is in the public interest to sell, or otherwise dispose of, any of the articles or materials requisitioned.

The President's action was considered far reaching and significant. Defense experts said that under that authority the United States could regain possession of raw materials, equipment and supplies already sold but not yet shipped to foreign countries and then either retain them, or dispose of them to other foreign countries or individuals.

world is involved. I ask you to become soldiers in the battle to preserve and build America.

"Now we face a foe, entrenched and up to date, the only things offered are smug silence and imaginary military inspection trips and lofty statements about international policy. I notice on the inspection trip that at Ravenna they issued a release on the train before they got to the town, telling what a great military site it was. You tell me how it helps your defense and mine for the third term candidate to spend 21 minutes in a steel mill when he doesn't know anything about the manufacture of steel and never will. It is playing politics not only with defense but you and me.

"I talk frankly as an aspirant for the presidency. I think it is the duty of a candidate to present himself to the people and discuss the issues of the campaign.

"We should, at all hazards, preserve this method of government."

"I am very appreciative of the several hundred people who came down here today. Now as I say, we face a foe that has in hand a billion dollars of money for the campaign to bring about continued entrenchment and power. But we are free American citizens. I ask each of you to be a missionary in the cause of a soldier in the battle for America. I thank you very much."

Amid this intensified Nazi onslaught, the critical situation in the Balkans grew rapidly darker. 10,000 Hear Wilkie's Speech men Smith. The congressman in introductory remarks, declared far more than a matter of reelection was involved in the third term issue of the national campaign, asserting the question easily may be "whether this is to be the last election in the United States." Choosing between the presidential candidates is choosing between unemployment and jobs for all, bankruptcy and prosperity, war and peace, he said.

Congressman Smith then introduced Governor Bricker, Mayor Burton, Congressman Marshall and Bricker, and then Wilkie. After Wilkie's talk, he introduced Mrs. Wilkie, who received an ovation almost equal to that given her husband. Although she only nodded her gratitude and made no effort to speak because of the time for departure of the train, she kept the crowd in cheers for several minutes.

Mrs. Wilkie, in a blue dress, gray coat with fur collar and a close-fitting small blue hat, carried a sheaf of roses. Wilkie was in a dark gray suit.

Pleased with Reception

Both Mr. and Mrs. Wilkie, on the way from Mansfield to Marion, expressed their pleasure over preparations that had been made for a district-wide gathering to meet them here. Mr. Wilkie remarked in his speech here that crowds all along the route have been larger than expected. At Mansfield the turnout was around 2,500. The train did not stop at Gallon, but several hundred persons gathered along the tracks to wave to persons on the train.

Wilkie made a trip through the car carrying a delegation of Marion residents who went to Mansfield to ride the train to Marion. Shortly before the train reached Marion, he personally met every one who had boarded the train at the last stop at Marion. He greeted them with a handshake and a word of encouragement. Despite the pressure of time, Wilkie wasn't hurried, he wasn't nervous and he seemed to enjoy the arduous schedule he is following.

Fresh from a night's rest on the train between Buffalo, where he spoke last night, he gave his first talk of the day at Mansfield. He went on to Springfield, Dayton, Hamilton and Cincinnati, the latter talk scheduled for tonight.

Mrs. Wilkie Likes Ohio

Mrs. Wilkie, on the trip from Mansfield to Marion, received Congressman Smith and several other persons including two newspapermen. She chatted about the day's schedule, commented about her husband's speeches and expressed her pleasure over the way Ohioans are receiving them. She remarked that Wilkie speaks extemporaneously but that "while the words are extemporaneous the thoughts are carefully aren't." She said she never ceases to marvel at his ability to read books, magazines and newspapers and "to be able to draw from a vast fund of information that the ordinary person doesn't often remember, and frequently quotes from reports read weeks beforehand."

Asked about the rigors of a campaign trip such as the swing through Ohio today, she answered that after the first day or two in a campaign train isn't especially wearying. She said Mr. Wilkie had been protected from overwork by members of the campaign party, and had so arranged his schedule that they usually get a normal amount of sleep and that she has found the train trip, with speeches given from the train, more restful than the earlier stages of the campaign.

Visits with Governor

When the Marion delegation arrived in Mansfield this morning to board the Wilkie train for the ride to Marion, they had a chance to visit with Governor Bricker, Mayor Burton and other campaign notables as they bought tickets and waited for the train to arrive. Earl Johnson, state director of agriculture, Ed D. Schorr, state central committee chairman, Robert L. Barton of Columbus, president of the Ohio Young Republican clubs, Hugh Huntington of Columbus, treasurer of the state Republican organization and Herschel Atkinson, administrator of the bureau of unemployment compensation, were among the others who boarded the train at Mansfield, most of them to ride through to Cincinnati.

In the Marion delegation were A. W. Baker, Erie railroad here, more and better things at decreasing prices and ever higher standards for the farmer and the worker. This can be accomplished by more production and by constant attention to refinement of the machinery of distribution.

"Think what these things mean to this very town. If prohibition is increased to the point where every able bodied and willing worker in the community has a job at good pay, it will mean that some factory down the street that is now closed will be opened up, and that those now running on short shifts will be running full time."

For every dollar added to the weekly pay check of the 40,000 industrial workers of America, he said, the national income is increased by more than $2,000,000,000 a year.

The Mansfield talk, first of six scheduled for Ohio during the day, followed his assertion at Buffalo that jobs constitute one of two major issues in the presidential campaign. The other, he said, is defense.

Addressing himself to "persons who will, under no circumstances vote for me," the Republican candidate said:

"Please, please, for the preservation of this system of government, require this man, before you vote for him, to define what his program, what his principles and what his policies will be."

The Mansfield crowd cheered as Wilkie appeared on the platform of his private car and waved.

"Here in Ohio," he said, "we know that the prosperity of one group is the prosperity of all groups. We know that our people can't be divided into classes without damage to every group."

"I believe in an expanding economy which constantly raises the standard of living of those who work. Away with the static economy which says, 'this is the fixed price.'"

WILLIE INTRODUCES BRICKER AND BURTON

BELLEFONTAINE, O., Oct. 16.—Wendell Wilkie's campaign train made an unscheduled stop here today. The presidential candidate introduced Gov. Bricker and Harold H. Burton, U. S. senatorial candidate, to the crowd at the station, but Wilkie himself made no formal talk.

Efficient Draft Registration Reported

Ohio would be the first of the states to complete the job.

Men subject to the compulsory service law who fail to register, except for serious illness, will be liable to a maximum penalty of five years imprisonment and $10,000 fine. Special registrars visited men in hospitals.

Young men away from home were permitted to register at any precinct voting booth. Approximately 2,000 filled in the 11-question registration card on the Ohio State university campus.

Among the notables registering in Ohio will be Mayor John Q. Carey of Toledo, who was 35 years old on May 20; and Bobo Feller, Cleveland baseball pitcher. General Light called at least one representative of each of the state's 336 draft boards to Columbus today for a discussion of regulations and problems. The three Marion county boards were represented at the meeting.

Gen. Light said it was impossible to estimate how many Ohioans would be taken in the first draft, due in 30 to 60 days, but the state probably would be credited with greater than average number of regulars in the army, navy and marine corps.

The war department announced that 694 enlisted in the army's Fifth corps area, with headquarters at Columbus, during the week ended Oct. 12. The enlistments raised the total for the area since May to 15,900.

Advance units of the Ohio national guard, mostly military police, left for Camp Shelby, Miss., to make ready for other Ohio units due to arrive soon for a year's training. The guardsmen reported for active duty yesterday.

Sons of Veterans Enroll

Millions of men who answered the draft 23 years ago last June saw their sons step into line for registration at election precincts and schools throughout the nation.

Even some veterans of the A. E. F.—those who lied about their ages then and enlisted at 12 or 13—traced their steps after nearly a quarter of a century to enroll again.

From the pool of 16,404,000 registering today, selective service officials expected to draw 5,000,000 men ready and able to undergo military training in the next four and a half years—nearly 750,000 more than were mobilized to fight the war of 1917 and 1918.

Where some 12,000,000 men from the first draft in 1917, those from 21 through 35 are registering today.

The President made another distinction, too, between this call and that of 1917, when he stated in his message:

"We prepare to keep the peace in this new world. * * * It is a program obviously of defensive preparation and of defensive preparation only."

To the 16,404,000 approaching a new experience for America—peace-time conscription, the President's words were:

"Democracy is your cause—the cause of youth. * * * Your act today affirms not only your loyalty to your country, but your will to build your future for yourselves."

The message from Wendell L. Wilkie, Republican presidential nominee, was this:

"You are registering one more chance for freedom—your chance for freedom. He pledged his efforts to 'take the power of the American industry' from the young men who may be called to duty."

Complete Registration

With a few specific exceptions, all men between 21 and 36 were obligated to report to the 125,000 registration places between 7 a. m. and 9 p. m. with special provisions for those ill or unavoidably detained and stern penalties for willful evaders.

President Roosevelt himself has one son, John, registering. Already in army, navy and marine reserve units, the other three sons are exempt from registration.

Though automatically exempted by law from service, at least one state governor, 2 United States senators and 10 members of the house of representatives also must register.

Not only Gov. Harold E. Stassen, 33, but Senator-designate Joseph M. Ball, 34, and Lieut. Gov. C. Elmer Anderson, 28, must register in Minnesota.

Among the mayors of major cities, Carl Zeidler, 32, chief magistrate of Milwaukee, is within the draft-age limits.

And flags and banners made registration day a patriotic holiday. Numerous business firms either shut down entirely or gave their young men time off to register. Literally hundreds of thousands of citizens volunteered to help in the registration drive, officially and unofficially.

Entire Family on Roll

John H. Wegmanns of New Orleans sent a "one-family army" register. Six of his 11 sons, 12 of them priests, are within the age limits.

Among the notables registering will be: Francis Warren Pershing, 31, New York broker and only son of the commander-in-chief of the A. E. F.; Bob Feller, young baseball pitcher; Joe Louis, 26, the heavy-weight boxing champion; Mas Baer, 31, the former champ; and his brother, Buddy Baer, 26.

Taking advantage of provisions for away-from-home registrants, nearly 100 clergymen attending the convention of the United Lutheran church of America will enroll in Omaha.

LUTHERANS TO EXPRESS VIEW ON VATICAN ENVOY

By The Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. Oct. 16 — The United Lutheran church of America was expected to express its attitude today toward appointment of U. S. envoys to the Vatican.

Delegates awaited a report from a special committee, selected after President P. H. Knobel in his opening address to the convention termed President Roosevelt's appointment of a personal representative last year "a cause of suspicion that political influences from religious sources are being exerted upon American national life."

President Knobel sought from the committee a general statement which would express the Lutheran attitude not only against the first appointment but against any future ones as well.

The week-long convention comes to a close today.

Presidents Slated to Trounce Bucyrus Friday Night

Harding Due To Move Step Nearer 1940 N. C. O. Grid Championship;
Woodward Movies Studied.

BY SATURDAY morning Marion Harding should be a step nearer the 1940 North Central Ohio conference football championship. That point is conceded throughout the circuit, except in the small circle of gridders comprising Coach Nick Wasylik's Bucyrus High team. They're due to be convinced on their home grounds Friday night when only a miracle can save them from being added to the long list of Harding victims.

It's virtually as simple as that! Coach Bill Williams needs only to unleash his warriors and they should be able to march over the Redmen by a margin of five or six touchdowns. The score probably won't run that high for several reasons. First, the President second-stringers will get another chance to taste action. Second, Williams still will be holding back for Shelby a week later, since the Whippersnappers are considered the sole obstacle in Marion's little path.

Take in the Movies
Squad members, after a long workout at the stadium grounds yesterday afternoon, convened again last night to view pictures of last week's Toledo Woodward game. Some of the things they saw must have made them blush with shame, while still other spectacles could have had them bursting with pride. They looked exceptionally good defensively, as they have in every ball game, against Woodward. But again, despite three touchdowns, they didn't pack the scoring punch anticipated by observers.

Coach Wasylik, who with members of the Bucyrus team, saw Harding trim Toledo probably is spending no little time on pass defense. It was Marion's aerials that set the stage for all three touchdowns, the first time the Presidents really opened up via the air lanes.

Toledo's only score was a mistake—it never should have happened. John Edington, Harding punter, was standing much too close to the line of scrimmage. He almost could have been accused of using a quick-kick formation for a punt—as a result Woodward broke through, something which may not happen to Harding's veteran line again this season, and then rambled into Marion's end zone for a touchdown.

Scores Poor Comparison
Bucyrus observers are planning a lot of hope on comparative scores, which everyone knows is a poor way to rate football teams. Here's how they figure. Harding trimmed Tiffin Columbus 12-0 and Bucyrus turned the trick 19-0, making the Redmen seven points better than the Presidents. That may be all right, except the same observer didn't make the following comparison. Harding defeated Ashland 12-6 and the A's lost to Shelby 7-6, making Marion five points better than Shelby. Shelby in turn trimmed Bucyrus 26-14, which in turn makes the locals something like 17 points tougher than the Redmen.

Harding and the Redmen have met every season since 1920, with the Presidents winning 10, losing eight. Marion currently is enjoying its longest victory streak, now at five games, previously having won four from 1923 through 1926, while the longest period of supremacy by the Redmen was a three-year season 1929 through 1931. Bucyrus last defeated Harding in 1934, then by a 6-0 count.

IRISH WITHOUT FOUR REGULARS AS TILT WITH CAREY NEARS

Two May Get Back in Time for Friday Night Game
at Stadium.

Bernard Berens, coach of the Marion St. Mary football team, takes over that big stack of crying towels just where Bill Williams, Marion Harding mentor, discarded them several weeks ago. And the Irish pilot has plenty of reason to use them today.

He's minus four of his regulars and the season is only half played. John Robbins, Jim Daum, Jim Pfeiffer and Ted Schuler all were hurt in the game at Fostoria St. Wendelin last week. Robbins, starting center, suffered torn ligaments in his knee and probably will be idle the rest of the season. Daum, who holds down an end post, may be able to return late in the schedule if he's lucky, suffered torn ankle ligaments.

Pfeiffer is a guard, while Schuler, the sparkplug of the club, is in the backfield, and has carried all seven of the Saints' touchdowns this season. With a reasonable amount of good fortune both may get back into service by Friday night when Carey comes here to furnish the opposition for the season's second home game at Harding stadium. Both suffered minor knee injuries.

This week's schedule at St. Mary includes, aside from the practice routine, a pep rally after school Friday. Carey is due to arrive an hour before game time and officials of the visiting school have reported their school band will make the trip here. Coach Berens indicated today that after Carey's visit there may be only one other home game this season, the game here Nov. 1 with Columbus St. Charles.

Team Spirit Puts Wildcats Back in U. S. Football Scene

"One for All and All for One" Is Northwestern Cry
Bauman, De Corvont Lead.

By The Associated Press
EVANSTON, Ill., Oct. 16.—Northwestern's return to football power is the story of a group of bewildered, deflated sophomores who refused to lose faith in their own ability to click in the big time competition.

The Wildcats, surprise victors over Ohio State Saturday, are riding high with wonderful possibilities for the season because the players found a new spirit—"one for all and all for one"—to match their physical talent. Big Al Bauman, 215-pound Junior tackle, and Bill DeCorvont, ace halfback, are leading this parade back to the top, just as this high to dazzling deeds three seasons ago.

Contrast Northwestern's present grid situation with that of just a year ago and you know that somewhere along the line a radical change has been wrought. Northwestern started in 1933 by losing to Oklahoma and Ohio State, scoring no points while the two rivals were piling up 36 points.

Now the Wildcats have scored to Oklahoma and Ohio State, scoring only one less point than they tallied last season, when highly-rated senior-studded squads won only three games.

"I'll tell you the one big difference in the two squads," growled-headed DeCorvont. "No body on our club now is thinking of all-star ratings or anything like that. All we want to do is win football games and we don't care how we do it. Just score the most points, that's our goal."

"Yeah, we got a great bunch of fellows," echoed the massive Bauman. "Everybody is in shape to run to go. We know we've got a tough job ahead, but that's okay. Right now our main thought is of Wisconsin. They're always tough."

Northwestern is off to a fine start, obviously, but the team's second string line still has to prove itself. The first stringers went almost all the way against Ohio State.

Locker Room Gossip

By ROBERT OLDS
United Press Sports Writer

With the bulky 20-member Ohio Conference experiencing a rapid decline in the number of football games scheduled each year, there's some talk again about another conference. That is, there's talk of a need for another collegiate loop in Ohio but little progress apparently is being made.

Since the abolition of the Buckeye conference there have been reports that a new loop was being contemplated. But nothing ever developed.

Wesleyan Coach Leader
George W. Gauthier, now in his 20th season as athletic director at Ohio Wesleyan, fathered the old Buckeye loop and reportedly has tried several times to bring about a new conference.

The "Little Giant" says, however, that things are at a standstill. "I know of no new conference being planned at the present time," Gauthier said. "I am very much interested in the formation of a new conference but I would hope to see some division formed with teams of similar strength and similar types of institutions, either within the Ohio Conference or as new groups."

"Preferably, I would like to see the Ohio Conference as a parent organization with leagues within the conference."

There have been reports the formation of a new loop to take the place of the Buckeye has been blocked because one or two former members are considered to some college officials not "pun enough" athletically. Miami supposedly has held aloof from a conference proceedings, with a lead being taken by Ohio Wesleyan, Ohio U., Dayton and Cincinnati.

Oddsmen
Upper Sandusky's football league is to be finished in time for the final four home games. Off to a fine start this season Nick Paul's 11-man team switched to six-man games for three games. The Indian nation Olenyans is so familiar around Columbus that the city official has started a hunt for a new name for Olenyans Blvd.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15 — Scratch any college football team these days, and you'll uncover a prospect for All-America back-some of them.

All-America backfield nominations always have been plentiful, and in the days of the turn of the century when Yale's Bulldogs, now demolished, dominated the football world.

Admittedly the returns barely are starting to come in, but early season reports from Associated Press football experts all over the country indicate two carry-overs from the 1939 All-America team are operating even more effectively than a year ago. One is Thomas Dudley Harmon, the Michigan thunderbolt, and the other is John Alec Kimbrough, Texas A. and M.'s line-smasher.

Harmon's exploits thus far are all but incredible. The Wolverine star has scored 69 of the 88 points Michigan has scored and has passed for 12 other points. Few can dissent when Tommy is called football's greatest runner since Red Grange.

Kimbrough is the same unstoppable line-runner he was a year ago. This 223-pound battering ram spent four days in a Dallas hospital last week, ridding himself of a possible "hip" throat infection, went by plane Friday to Los Angeles, played 60 minutes against U. C. L. A. and scored the game's only touchdown.

Three other members of last year's second and third All-America teams are back—Paul Christman of Missouri; Don Scott of Ohio State and Jack Crain of Texas. Christman has been handicapped by a leg injury, although he is passing as brilliantly as ever. Scott has been somewhat overshadowed by his team-mate, however, has picked up night where he left off and is called by most Southwest Conference coaches the finest ball-carrier the conference ever has known.

Plenty of Others
Ranking well up on the ball-carrying list are such stars as Bob Fox, Tennessee; Jim (Sweet) Lallane, North Carolina; Jack Jacobs, Oklahoma's Indian athlete; John (Junie) Hovious and Merle Hapes, Mississippi's triple threats; Bobby Robertson, Southern California; Jim Kisselburgh, Oregon State; Dean Adams, Washington; Bill Sewell, Washington State; Harvey Johnson, Mississippi State; Bill Dudley, Virginia; Tuffy Timmons,

Jim Thorpe Recalls Old Times

"GOOD OLD DAYS" — Gridiron feats were retold at Philadelphia when Jim Thorpe, Carlisle Indians' All-American star, was feted. At left is Ray Morrison, Temple coach. Jim, now 52 and 225 pounds, hopes his four sons "will all be athletes." Thorpe is a former Marion county resident.

Clemson; Leo Stasica, Colorado; Hal McCullough, Cornell; Frank Reagan, Penn.; Steve Filipowicz, Fordham; Bill Busik, Navy; Sal Mirabito, Syracuse; George Kramcum, Pitt; Paul Governale, Columbia; George Franck, Minnesota; Milt Piepul, Notre Dame; Bill De Correvolt, Northwestern; Bill Green, Iowa; Herman Rohrig, Nebraska; George Paskvan, Wisconsin; and dozens more.

And how about the unsung heroes — the blocking backs? A few of these human bowling balls are known generally, but most of them are relegated to obscurity while the ball carriers gather the headlines. Men like Walter Matuzczak, Cornell's great blocker, and play-caller; Forest Evashevski of Michigan and Jimmy Thomason of the Texas Aggies have been accorded general recognition.

But there are many others—Jimmy Ringgold, Wake Forest; Bobby Grush, Tulane; Hersey Young, Denver; Will Mullenweg, Southern Methodist; Henry Toczylowski, Boston college; Thornley Wood, Columbia; Johnny Harrell, Navy; George Peters, Oregon State.

The list should be longer, but most blockers are just another name in the lineup.

BANK AT MT. GILEAD WILL PAY DIVIDEND

$27,000 To Be Distributed in Liquidation.

Special to The Star
MT. GILEAD, Oct. 15 — A dividend of five per cent of the original claims against the Mt. Gilead National Bank, in liquidation since 1935, will be paid beginning next Monday according to an announcement made today by the liquidating trustees, Benj. Olds, Edd McClarren and Ward Peoples.

The total to be distributed is approximately $27,000 and brings the total payments made by the liquidators to depositors up to $367,000.

Three dividends have been paid. The first of 50 per cent of the deposits at the time the voluntary liquidation program was agreed upon by the depositors, stockholders and officers in 1935. The second was eight per cent and the third was five per cent. The fourth will also be five per cent of the total claims of depositors.

Ward Peoples, who is the liquidating clerk, said that depositors must present their participation certificates in order to get their checks. The payments will be made at the office of the clerk in the banking house of the First National Bank in Mt. Gilead and will be made only on Mondays and Saturdays from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m. beginning next Monday.

The bank was closed in 1933 in the general banking holiday and was never reopened although it was operated by a conservator for two years.
